Can you exchange energy in Dragon Ball Legends?

Interestingly, Dragon Ball Legends also allows you to exchange in-game currencies for Energy. You can exchange energies for Chrono Crystals, although the trade rate of 500 energies for 500 Chrono Crystals might not be the best. Other currencies, like adventure currencies, could also be used to obtain Energy.

How do you get energy in legends road?

Similarly, the Legends Road events are easy paths to obtain a good amount of Energy, with each event offering over 200 Energy. Daily events in Legends Road and the Hoiboy event are also excellent sources of Energy, offering rewards in exchange for Hoipoi coins, which can be earned through co-op or raid activities.

How much energy can an en tank hold?

The EN Tank can hold up to 9,999 points of excess Energy. Energy will be stored here when you use Chrono Crystals to restore your Energy and exceed your limit, or when your Z Level increases. You can check how much Energy is left in the tank when selecting how to restore Energy.

Does playing a story cost energy?

Playing a Story costs Energy. Energy is restored automatically at a rate of one point every 20 minutes. However, it won't be restored past its maximum limit. *Energy can be restored with Chrono Crystals up to 50 times per day. Using Chrono Crystals allows you to restore 10 points of Energy per usage and also allows you to acquire some Skip Tickets.

How do you use en tank energy?

Energy can be used directly from your EN Tank when you don't have enough to play a Story. There are 4 difficulties: Normal, Hard, Scream, and Despair. High difficulty means stronger enemies but better rewards. Some Stories have unlock conditions. Meet these conditions to play them. Each story has battle Challenges.
