Do you need planning permission to install solar panels on your roof?

An increasing number of people are investing in solar energy. More and more homes are having solar panels, or solar tiles, installed on their roofs. Of course, with such installations, the topic of planning permission and building regulations often comes to the surface.

Can a solar PV system be installed on a dwellinghouse or block of flats?

(e) the solar PV or solar thermal equipment would be installed on a building within the curtilage of the dwellinghouse or block of flats if the dwellinghouse or block of flats is a listed building. A.2 Development is permitted by Class A subject to the following conditions--

Can I install solar panels if I don't meet building regulations?

Your local authority can also apply for a Confiscation Order to take away any money you've earned with your system - so there's absolutely no benefit to installing solar panels that don't meet building regulations. It's crucial that your solar installation follows all building regulations.

Can solar panels be installed on a listed building?

The solar panels must not be installed on a building that is a listed building, unless the panels are flush with the roof or integrated into the roof covering. If your solar panel installation falls within these parameters, your neighbours won't have any grounds to object.

Are solar panels a 'permitted development'?

There are certain parameters that solar panel installations must adhere to in order to be considered a 'permitted development.' These parameters include: The solar panels must not protrude more than 200mm from the surface of the roof, or more than 1m above the highest part of the roof (excluding chimneys).

Is a solar extension a 'material' planning consideration?

If your neighbour proposes an extension that blocks light to your solar panels, is that a 'material' planning consideration? This was recently considered in the case of McLennan v Medway Council. Mr McLennan had solar panels on his residential property. His next-door neighbour applied for planning permission for an extension.
