What is an instant tent?

Most instant tents have a cabin shape and are ready to be set up as soon as they're unfolded. They often have built-in poles attached to the fabric. Instant tents may also be called pop-up tents--in general, instant tents refer to any tent that sets up or "pops up" instantaneously upon unfolding. Q: What are the disadvantages of cabin tents?

What is a cabin camping tent?

On the other hand, cabin camping tents are best for more lush camping experiences. They're large, spacious, and made for lounging. Including these angled windows means you can maintain a comfortable and breezy atmosphere while still discouraging rain from entering the tent.

Are cabin tents good for big groups?

Cabin tents are perfect for big groups because they tend to be on the larger side. But anyone who likes to have a comfortable camping experience can benefit from a cabin tent. You might be a great candidate for a cabin tent if you feel claustrophobic in other tents that have lower ceiling heights.

Which cabin tent should I buy?

If you're looking to get started with a cabin tent, we recommend the CORE 9 Person Instant Cabin Tent. It's large enough for a big group, but not so big that it feels like you're in a circus tent. It's got solid weather protection but won't empty your wallet. It also comes in a 6-person and 12-person version as well.

Should you buy an instant cabin tent?

Investing in an instant cabin tent means you'll be able to spend more time enjoying your camping trip and less time fumbling with poles and tent stakes. Some cabin tents come with a detachable room divider to create multiple rooms.

Eureka tents are pretty affordable for their size, but this makes me wary, as reviews say they're cheaply made. I'm considering a Columbia Mammoth Creek cabin tent, but not 100% sold on it yet. Does anyone have any suggestions for a good cabin tent, (preferably 8-man or 6-man) for use at campgrounds?
