Power Station was a supergroup made up of singer Robert Palmer, bassist John Taylor and guitarist Andy Taylor of Duran Duran, and former Chic drummer Tony Thompson; Bernard Edwards, also of Chic were also involved on the studio side as recording producer. The band was formed in New York City late in 1984 during a break in Duran Duran's schedule which became ...

The Power Station's breakout single was a simple but surprisingly fresh reworking of T. Rex's 1971 glam rock hit "Get It On (Bang a Gong)." With its immense, driving riff, The Power Station's version feels right at home between Duran Duran's "Hungry Like the Wolf" and Palmer's "Addicted to Love," which would come out the ...

The Power Station was a British-American 1980s/1990s rock and pop music supergroup originally formed in New York City and London in 1984. It was made up of singer Robert Palmer, former Chic drummer Tony Thompson, and Duran Duran members John Taylor (bass) and Andy Taylor (guitar). Bernard Edwards, also of Chic, was involved on the studio side as recording producer ...

The Power Station was released in March 1985 and was a worldwide success, marrying sophisticated funk with hard-rock bombast. Despite its commercial success, however, the media, especially in the UK, found it difficult to equate the musicians with the music - the "too heavy for pop fans, too pop for rock fans" way of thinking. ...
